GLEANEED BY SCRIBES

Miss Emma J. Price, aged 78, a retired school teacher, died Friday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hartman, Richlandtown pike, near Quakertown. Born in Philadelphia, she was the daughter of the late Jonas and Caroline (nee Weidner) Price.

In 1885, she began teaching in rural schools near here, and in 1908 she joined the faculty of the borough schools, where she taught until her retirement in June, 1933.

She was a member of St. John's Reformed Church, Richlandtown, where for the greater part of her life she was a member of the choir. She was also a member of Quakertown Chapter, O. E. S.

Survivors include the sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hartman, with whom she resided, and a brother, William H. Price, Quakertown.

The Price Panel of the Doylestown War Price and Rationing Board welcomed a new member at its meeting last week. She is Mrs. W. P. Brandes, of Tinticum, and will act in the capacity of representative of Tinticum township on the panel.

Mrs. Frederica Child, chairman of the panel, reports that the membership now numbers seven but that representation from Hilltown, Plumstead, Buckingham, and Berdminister townships and from Silverdale and Dublin is still lacking. The efficiency of the panel is obviously impaired if these vicinities cannot be contacted. Any who are willing to give a few hours per week to this worthwhile work will find their services greatly appreciated.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

A Major Mistake

Washington, Feb. 28. IT IS entirely accurate to say that Mr. Roosevelt emerges from the tax bill veto incident with diminished prestige, damaged in Congress and in the country. For the first time his own readers really missed the significance that the only Senators who failed to join in the tribute to Senator Barkley after his sensational speech were four who, distinctly, are not among our first—or even our second—grade statesmen.

FROM whatever angle the performance is viewed, no credit attaches to the President—and almost none is claimed for him by the pro-Roosevelt publications and commentators. There was so little to say in defense that mostly they were silent. Detached judgment generally is that the message was one of Mr. Roosevelt's major mistakes. Even if he had had right on his side, the long delay in acting would have cost the Treasury many millions in taxes that could have been collected, and are now irretrievably lost. But, he did not have right on his side. Inadequate as the bill concededly is, the reasons he gave for the veto were unsound; the facts, as he presented them, were twisted; his own words and his own Secretary of the Treasury were repudiated by some of his own statements.

—O—

IN addition, his language was violent, bad-tempered, indefensible. Phrases such as "not for the needy but for the greedy" did not make sense and sounded like the cheap campaign oratory of a confirmed demagogue. Most of the phraseology is attributed to Ex-Judge Sam Rosenman, now the recognized writer of messages. Only two deductions seem possible from this one—first, that Mr. Roosevelt was confused in his mind, did not know the facts and was badly advised;

Return To Tunisia; Writer Visits Battlefields

This is the last of a series of 12 articles by an International News Service staff correspondent describing a return visit to Tunisian battlefields.

By Graham Hovey
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

BIZERTE, Feb. 28.—(INS)—Over on the boulevard De La Republique the hazaar, once one of the smart stores, is a battered, silent wreck.

A couple of blocks from the waterfront is the Notre Dame de Paris cathedral. Its front looks barely normal. Walk through the door and you are practically outdoors, for the huge church is only a shell.

In the canal which connects the Mediterranean with Lake Bizerte a battered ship which the Germans mined and tried to sink still lies half submerged.

Even the Cafe-Bar De La Paix is closed.

Those are only samples. Many Tunisian towns were scarred by the war. Beautiful Bizerte was ruined.

It is depressing to return to Bizerte today. It was exhilarating the first day I visited the famous port city. That day was May 8, approximately two hours after the first American reconnaissance elements had entered the town.

You will find in the records that the Americans captured Bizerte on May 7 and that the first elements entered at 3:15 p. m. Actually, however, isolated German "suicide" squads with twenty-millimeter cannons, machine-guns and rifles were still holding out from sniping positions in waterfront buildings when two other correspondents and I entered shortly after noon of May 8.

It was an odd thing that capture of Bizerte, for which we had been fighting for so many months. When our first tank, command by Capt. Worthington H. Muzzy, of Concord, N. H., rolled through Bizerte's ancient gates and started down into the heart of the city, it looked like another triumphal entry of the Ferrisville variety. What few Bizertains were left turned out to throw flowers and cheers; the Germans appeared to have retreated across the canal and the Americans put their heads out of their tank turrets to enjoy the celebration.

Then things changed in a hurry. As the tanks neared the business district, gendarmes stopped them and warned that German gunners were still in town. So the Americans climbed back into their battle positions and started to mop up.

TWO COMMUNITIES START POST-WAR PLANS

Langhorne and Doylestown Inaugurate Activities To Honor Veterans

ONE PLANS MEMORIAL

Two Bucks County communities are now engaged in inaugurating plans for after the war. Doylestown has started plans to select a proper memorial in honor of the veterans of World War II while the Langhorne Lions Club is now making plans for the home-coming of the veterans after the present global conflict is over.

At a meeting of the Langhorne Lions Club at the Langhorne Country Club, President Herbert Walker announced plans are under way for the home-coming of the veterans of the war.

A general committee is being formulated to make the arrangements and various Langhorne organizations have been invited to send delegates from each of the groups.

President Walker will appoint two from the Lions club.

Tentative plans for the organization of a community-wide campaign for the raising of funds for a suitable memorial of some type for the men and women serving in the present war, were discussed at a meeting held in the Grand Jury room of the Court House, Doylestown, recently.

Dr. John J. Sweeney, Burgess of Doylestown, and a veteran of the first World War, was elected chairman to head the organization that will conduct the campaign. The meeting was called by Burgess Sweeney and those in attendance were of the opinion the Burgess was the proper individual to head a memorial committee. Frank N. Shelley was appointed temporary secretary.

Informal discussions took place but the type of memorial was not decided, nor where it is to be located or what territory is to be covered, but the memorial park appeared to be foremost in the minds of those present.

Registration for Classes Will Open Tonight

Registration will begin this evening for the tuition-free war training courses being offered here for the first time by the extension services of The Pennsylvania State College. The registration will take place at the high school from 7 to 9 p. m. in both evenings.

Sixteen technical courses, designed for those persons who are now employed and who desire to do part-time study for the purpose of fitting themselves for more responsible assignments, or to help qualify unemployed persons for employment, are being offered. The entire program is based upon a survey made of local industries and the training needs specified by them.

Sponsored by the United States Office of Education these courses are being given by Penn State in over a hundred centers throughout the state. The aim of the program is to fill the need for technically skilled workers in war industries, a need that has become of extreme importance today.

The only cost to the student will be that of textbooks, which can be ordered direct from the stockrooms of the College.

Orders Man Held In Prison Until Induction

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 28.—A sentence of from one to 23 months in the county prison and to pay the costs of his trial was given to John Moss Phillips, 18, Almont, convicted of robbery, larceny and receiving stolen goods, by Judge Calvin S. Boyer following the report of the jury at 9:30 o'clock Friday evening, after four hours of consideration.

Judge Boyer, in pronouncing sentence, recommended that no parole be given Phillips at the end of the minimum sentence but that he be released for induction when called by the draft board, and that he be held in prison until that time.

The trial of Phillips started Thursday morning and the charge to the jury was completed by Judge Boyer at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. The Commonwealth closed its side of the case Friday morning with trooper M. P. Yetter testifying to the details of the examination by the police at the time of his arrest.

Phillips, on the witness stand as the first witness for the defense, denied having any part in the robbery of the Kneisel home nor in the sale of the stolen articles to shops in Philadelphia. He testified that in the race described by Alec Sikora on Wednesday, he and not Sikora won the race and that the latter was absent for nearly five minutes, reversing the testimony given by the previous witnesses.

Mrs. Anna Phillips, mother of the defendant and a school teacher at Finland, testified in her son's behalf regarding his use of his car to drive her to school and return each day. She denied having any knowledge of the various articles that Phillips was charged with having stolen.

The members of the jury in the trial of Phillips were Robert C. Coles, Frederick H. Calt, Aaron K. Dolton, Jr., Atlee Edwards, Lillian Geddes, Robert J. Helms, Ezra Miller, Warren S. Oberholzer, D. Lamar Roberts, Eleanor Thompson Vione, Whitaker and Anna M. Young.

ENEMY MORALE DECLINES

It has been said often that no nation engaged in war should count upon the sagging morale of the enemy peoples to bring victory. The way to win wars is to fight them. But with that conviction firmly implanted in the minds of the citizens, there is no harm in studying reports dealing with the state of morale of the nation's foes. It may even have the quality of improving morale in this country.

Two dispatches, one from Zurich in Switzerland and the other from Chungking, China, report that morale is poorer, in Germany and in Japan. The Zurich report said that draft-dodging, stealing and food shortages are spreading in Germany, although a home front collapse cannot be expected unless Allied air raids and Nazi military defeats increase greatly.

The food situation was described as "catastrophic" in the large cities, especially those battered by Allied air attacks, with the result that there is a thriving black market and excessive thievery and looting.

The dispatch from Chungking quoted a Chinese graduate of the Imperial University of Tokyo, who had escaped to the Chinese capital after having gone to Peiping, as saying that Japanese students are digging slit trenches against air raids in all large cities of Japan, that the rationing of food has been tightened and arrests for "dangerous thoughts" are increasing.

He said the attitude of the Japanese toward the war varied from high optimism during Axis successes to dark despondency over defeats. The Japanese reverses in the Solomons hurt morale, he said, and the losses of Attu and Kiska in the Aleutians were exceptionally heavy blows. In the last few months, the people of Japan have become exceptionally gloomy.

Against this good news has to be placed the indisputable fact that the fighting men of Germany and Japan still perform courageously, with no evidence on their part of losing interest in their objectives or of a lessening of faith in their cause. Cassino and Ta-raw are proof of that.

Gene Tunney, who returned recently from the South Pacific, said that the Jap soldier still believes that he is equal to five Americans and will act on that conviction. When armies numbering millions of men are convinced, however erroneously, of their superiority, it takes a lot of fighting to prove them wrong.

Except for bombing of war industries in the Reich and other areas, the war effort of America is directed against the fighting men of the enemy nations. As long as the home fronts of the two major foes hold together, however precariously, enemy armies will continue to be supplied and to constitute a grave menace.

But it is encouraging to hear that the morale of the enemy peoples is not so good.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Sept. 7, 1882. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

About half past one o'clock this afternoon a fire broke out in the middle of the row of frame houses situated along the railroad nearly opposite the station and owned by John Dorrance. The alarm was given and the fire companies and a large crowd of people were present.
There was some delay in getting up steam in the fire-engine, and the flames made considerable headway in spite of the efforts of the Hook and Ladder Company. There were seven families occupying the burned buildings. The most of the household goods belonging to them were saved. In half an hour's time the buildings were almost consumed.

Dr. John Ward has purchased the B. E. Allen property on the corner of Radcliffe and Mulberry streets.
The bulk windows will be removed from the store room and other changes made. He intends to convert the entire house into a private residence.

The jury yesterday awarded to Rogers Brothers $14,000 damage for property taken by the Railroad Company.

A line of barbed wire fence has been erected along the Pennsylvania Railroad at Tacony. Should it prove satisfactory it will be erected along the entire line from New York to Pittsburgh.

A number of races among local horses has been going on at the Wheatshaf track recently, and we learn that one or two were quite exciting and fair time made.

The tobacco crop of this section is about six weeks late, and will yield much better than was at first anticipated.

All the up river steamboats are carrying a large amount of freight.

During the past two weeks at least fifty boat loads of manure have been brought up the Benshaming creek for farmers in Benshaming and Bristol townships.

Thornton, King & Co. of New-portville, fifth wheel manufacturers, have just received some large orders from the west.

The third ward is ahead in the sunflower business as in many other things. For true aestheticism we always turn to that ward, and it is not surprising therefore it has turned out a sunflower weighing 4 pounds and 14 ounces, with a diameter of 14 inches.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

second, that, as Senator Barkley declared, this was a "calculated assault upon the integrity of every member of Congress," for campaign purposes. In brief, it was fourth-term strategy, designed to discredit Congress in the country.

NOT the least interesting part of the affair was the President's telegram after the Senate demonstration. It was a crawl. He said he did not mean it—that he had not the slightest intention of reflecting upon "Dear Alben" or any other member of Congress. He pled with the indignant Senator. He was apologetic in tone, clearly alarmed and in complete contrast to his abusive message. As for the effect upon the coming campaign, no one can be sure about that. Certainly, it has done Senator Barkley, a candidate for re-election good. One of the primary candidates against him has withdrawn in his favor.

Today, he appears a self-respecting man instead of an Administration tool whose abject devotion made him an object of derision and whose sufferings, when compelled to advocate proposals in which he did not believe, aroused both pity and contempt. Of course, it is absurd to start a Presidential boom for Senator Barkley just because he showed there was a limit to what he would stand. And, it is not likely he will stay indignant with an apologetic President. His letter of reply shows that.

HOWEVER, notwithstanding assurances of his affection and his adulatory wish for future co-operation, he will never return to his former slavish attitude. For one thing, his re-election to leadership relieves him of all obligation to Mr. Roosevelt, enables him to talk to him on even terms—not as a jobholding subordinate. And Mr.

Roosevelt will not treat him again as though he were a high-class old family servant—a habit he has with the faithful—and which, strangely enough, some seem to like. Concerning the effect upon the fourthterm prospects, there are two views. One is that no President can make a mistake like this and receive such a rebuke without losing political strength. The other is that the only voters who will be alienated are the discerning and intelligent. But, it is argued, he alienated 90 per cent. of those long ago, and the great unthinking masses who constitute the chief Roosevelt strength will not be affected. Either view may be right, but certainly that "accumulation of resentments," which is the real danger to the man who tries to hold on too long, has been added to.

PROBABLY the most pregnant thing is the convincing demonstration that Mr. Roosevelt has completely lost control of Congress—lost control of a Congress in which his own party has a majority—lost control of his own selected leaders; lost it publicly and humiliatingly.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Cremulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Cremulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to lose your money back.

CREMULSION
for Coughs, Chest Colds, Bronchitis

With the trend strongly toward a Republican House, it seems impossible now to believe that should Mr.
Roosevelt be re-elected he would have a Congress he could lead, boss or cajole. If he cannot do it with this Congress, he certainly will not be able to do it with the next. And that, of course, means governmen-

Extra milk needed
here today

WHEN there's someone sick at your house... or at the Greens' down the street... like as not, more than a normal supply of milk is needed. For fresh milk plays a very important part in invalid and back-to-health diets with such special foods as milk toast, custards, junkets and creamed dishes.

Here at Supplee, we're doing everything within our power to take care of the special needs of the sick, in spite of the limited milk supply... and Supplee customers are co-operating wholeheartedly. When you keep your order down to just enough milk to fulfil the nutritional needs of your family... you're helping us to distribute this most essential food where it is most needed.

1 Supplee, with the best efforts of farmers, fieldmen, and all employees, is continuing to get enough milk TO MEET THE REAL NEEDS OF ALL OUR CUSTOMERS.

2 Those "real needs," perhaps, do not include all the luxury uses to which milk is normally put.

3 We have no intention of telling you what the "real needs" of your family are.

Because every drop of milk is precious... and because your family needs milk for health and strength, and vigor... we know you'll do all you can to guard your share, and use it wisely while it's fresh and sweet. There's not a swallow to waste in the bottoms of the children's glasses... not a speck to spoil through standing too long in the hot kitchen.

For extra nourishment, you may take your order in Supplee Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin D Milk, with the cream mixed throughout. You can be sure that every bottle of milk that bears the Supplee Sealtest label is pure and fresh and uniform... for the quality of our milk is a Supplee tradition which we are determined not to change or break.

motion picture. It tells simply and graphically the story of a group of French soldiers imprisoned by the Nazis as hostages after the fall of France, their sufferings and hardships before they finally escape to France to fight again.

The all-male cast is led by Jean Pierre Aumont whose own career parallels closely the role he portrays in the film and who is now off fighting with General de Gaulle. After the Armistice, a group of French soldiers are promised freedom if they will lay down their arms. Instead, they find themselves imprisoned in Germany at a camp where the brutal Peter Lorre bends all his efforts to creating dissension among the men.

The Germans were downright stubborn about it and our boys were still cleaning them out 24 hours after the entry. It was a wild place when we arrived. One German twenty-millimeter cannon crew persisted in lapping shells up our way with disgusting frequency. Rifle bullets whizzed up side streets at irregular intervals, forcing everyone to duck low when dashing across intersections.

Bizerte was terribly beaten up from bombing and shelling and German demolitions when we arrived, and the first 24 hours thereafter witnessed a lot more flattening and battering—most of it contributed by German tank guns, which shelled the city incessantly from positions on the heights across the canal.

But we didn't mind that a pretty resort city, where people once laughed and sang and lived had been ruined by war that day. Instead, all of the Americans were in a state of exhilaration, for all of us knew that the end of our first campaign against the Germans in the second world war was only a few hours off; but the major objective of the final phase of our share of the campaign had been realized.

There was a good reason for mentioning the Cafe-Bar De la Paix. It was the only establishment in Bizerte open for business the day the Americans arrived. The owner and his two French barmaids nonchalantly served drinks that day to Americans French and British; some one pounded a penny piano and everyone sang songs of the last war while the shelling and sniping proceeded merrily outside.

Tank crews and combat engineers not engaged in mopping up could be seen sitting around on grass lawns or tombstones chatting jocosely, apparently completely oblivious to the danger.

I remember Sgt. Samuel Allen of Hudson, O., commander of a General Grant tank, strolling unconcerned down the boulevard looking for some engineers to mop up a couple of gun nests he had located. I remember a signal corps photographer, Sgt. Bernard Huber of Brooklyn, shooting pictures lazily in front of the bazaar while shells whistled up the street not 15 feet from him. It was like that in Bizerte that day.

Today most of the debris has been cleared from the streets and the U. S. Army is using some of the less damaged buildings. But only a handful of Bizertans are in the town and Americans and British soldiers and sailors comprise the overwhelming majority of the current population.

Most of the Bizertans have evacuated what was left of their belongings to Tunis and Ferryville. Most of them probably never will come back, although because of its geographical location Bizerte probably will be one of the first of the ruined Tunisian towns to be rebuilt after the war.

On the drive to Bizerte today, I followed the same route I took on that memorable May 7, except that I started in Ferryville today instead of merely passing through. When you leave Ferryville for Bizerte you find the smaller town of Tindja, just off to the left, and for sentimental reasons I drove in to Tindja. Three other correspondents and I always claimed that we had captured the town, for we were the first Americans to enter it, our tanks and armored cars passing it up to continue the push to Bizerte.

Today the good burghers of Tindja just smoke their long pipes and show no excitement at all when they see an American. They have seen a lot of Americans since the day when they gave us a welcome.

The road to Bizerte is now flanked by a number of U. S. Army hospitals. On the right, a few kilometers outside Bizerte, stretches the Sidi Ahmed Airport, now used by Allied planes but once a Luftwaffe base. We found ruins of approximately 100 aircraft at Sidi Ahmed the day Bizerte fell—concrete evidence of the striking power of Allied air forces. American and British planes use Sidi Ahmed today.

I wanted to drive as fast as our command car would go for the last half mile stretch leading to the city gate, for the last time I went over that stretch it was being interdicted by enemy shellfire.

And despite the devastation it gave me a thrill to return to Bizerte. For Bizerte was the end of the road for the American forces in Africa; the reaching of the first real milestone on the road to victory over the European portion of the Axis.

After following these American forces all the way from the dark February days of Faid and Kasserine, it was good to be in on the kill and it was good to revisit the spot where the kill took place.

Bensalem Students To Present Comedy youngest, a demon with the piano and a slingshot, is diminutive Marie Brown. Worry, the only son, who is positive he will be a famous writer, is class president John Dean. Marcia, an oldest daughter, for whom her mother has engineered a match with wealthy Sherwin Parker (Richard Rossbauer), is Jean Stuhltrager.

Nana is the grandmother who is concerned only with Bing Crosby records and with getting rid of her granddaughter's fiancé. This difficult and important character part is being taken in stride by Jeanne O'Dea.

The socialite Parkers, doting mother and pompous father, are represented very capably by Marcia Delino and Samuel Lombardo.

Probably the funniest character in the play is Cousin Lily, an adorable liar from the country who has stage aspirations which she inflicts upon the family. Betty Poston, an active member of the class and student body, is "going to town" in this part.

Other roles that add to the interest of this lively comedy are taken by Charlotte Smith and Robert Scheer.

The play is being directed by Miss Jane Kohler. Committee chairmen are Leroy Johnston, stage; Rita Vincent, properties; Matilda Lind, business; and Doris Walters, publicity.

URGENT! Said the Navy

... SO HERE THEY ARE

For the Great American HELLDIVER

Urgent and secret was the request to Chrysler Corporation to get ready to build these vital wing sections for the newest, biggest and fastest of Navy dive bombers — the great Helldiver.

Secretly designed to carry heavy loads at fast diving speeds, each wing section contained several thousand parts.

Engineers, tool designers, production experts of Chrysler Corporation went promptly to work. The drawings were made; tools and fixtures designed and installed for the day when the final "Go Ahead" signal would come.

The Go Ahead came in a hurry. Since April '43 these great Helldiver wing sections have moved down their guarded production lines much as automobiles did in former years, their thousands of precision parts assembled, and the wing sections completed.

The Helldivers have recently been fully tested and proven in South Pacific battle; reports of their action fulfill the strong claims made for them; and their wings, we are proud to say, carry their double bomb loads at fast diving speeds.

These Helldiver wing sections are but one of many war-production assignments in which Chrysler Corporation applies its experience and capacity in precision engineering and quantity manufacturing.
